Arab Chiefs Open Talks On Camp David Strategy

By Joe Alex Morris

BAGHDAD, Nov. 2 — Arab leaders opened a summit conference here today in a last-ditch effort to stop Egyptian President Anwar Sadat from signing a sepa-rate peace treaty with Israel.

All 22 Arab states, with the ex-ception of Egypt which was not invited, plus the Palestine Liberation Organization gathered in the presidential palace tonight to try to find an answer to the Camp David accords and the prospect of an Arab state making peace with Isra-

But there were some notable absentees, including Libyan leader, Col. Moamer Qadhafi, who apparently felt that this conference would not come up with anything more than a minimum consensus that Camp David was a bad thing.

But Libya was represented as were But Libya was represented, as were three states which have backed Mr.

Morocco, and Oman.
The Arab foreign ministers, who met for four days before the beads of state assembled, approved yesterday a draft declaration condemning the Camp David accords, but refusing to impose sanetious on Egypt for negotiating peace with Israel. That declaration is now before the Arab chiefs of state.

The meeting, proposed by Iraq, is aimed at keeping the Arab.camp united and at isolating Mr. Sadar. The tone was set by Iraqi President Ammed Hassan al-Bakr in his man-gural speech:

"We are not trying to isolate

Much of this speech was aimed at Saudi Arabia, which has said that it will not agree to any decisions to isolate Egypt. Mr. Bakr went further by stressing that the conference should make a last attempt to bring Egypt back into the Arab camp.
"We, who have the money, must

UN Sets Plans To Repatriate Zaire Nationals

GENEVA, Nov. 2 (AP) — The office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) today aunounced plans to repatriate some 110,000 Zaire nationals who have fled the country following bostilities there during the last two years.

Alain Peters, UNHCR delegate for West and Central Africa, said at a news conference the program, which is expected to take 12 months, will cost $11.375 million. He said it will initially be financed by UNHCR funds but appealed to UN member states to provide "the major part" of the money.

Mr. Peters warned, however, that the program depended on an agreeement by Zaire President Sese Seko Mobuto to extend the Dec. 31 deadline of an amnesty he announced in June covering all nationals outside the country.

Most of those being repatriated are currently in Angola, he said, with the others returning from Sudan, Uganda and Zambia. Of the 110,000 involved, an estimated 60,000 considered to be in greatest need are to be provided with trans-

In Reporting Cabinet Talks on Peace Strategy

Israel Press Defying Military Censors

By William Claiborne

JERUSALEM, Nov. 2 (WP) The Middle East negotiations in Washington have led to a feud between the Israeli press and the government over censorship of newspaper accounts of Cabinet discuson peace strategy.

Israeh journalists and editors are protesting what they call news management by the governmen and censorship of reports of politi-cal discussions in the Cabinet on security grounds. The editors are boycotting a tripartite censorship appeals commit-tee and, in deliance of the rules, have begun dramatizing the censor-ship by displaying blocks of white space in the news columns where material has been deleted.

Controls on Leaks

To control leaks, Prime Minister Menachem Begin has been desig-nating Cabinet meetings as meet-ings of the Ministerial Defense and Security Committee, thereby, theoretically, preventing public dis-closure of what takes place.

A Cabinet member can be fined or imprisoned for talking about such meetings, and reporters and editors can be similarly punished if they publish the information. In practice, those sanctions have not been imposed.

Given the competitiveness of Israel's freewheeling press and the loquaciousness of ministers who make up the coalition Cabinet, leaks are as certain as hot desert winds in July. Some ministers refuse comment when approached after the meetings, but others routinely oblige with accounts of the deliberations, with varying degrees of thoroughness and accura-

When that happens, the govern-ment turns, ironically, to a law that was enacted by the British govern-ment in 1933 to suppress the increasingly vocal Hebrew press.

The Mandatory Press Ordinance, which was translated into Hebrew and adopted by Israel, gives the government broad powers to constal the acres man. trol the news media. One clause empowered the interinewspaper if, in his opinion, publication could endanger public safety by causing panic or despair.

But the law is invoked principally by the Israeli Army censor to prevent the publication or broadcast of material considered to be a or minister to stop publication of a danger to national security, particularly military news. The present controversy stems # months of negotiations on a peace treaty with Egypt. Thus, construction of the settlements would not be expected to begin until mid-December at the earliest. The government of Prime Minister Meanshare Besid decided a Post Charges Antitrust Move By N.Y. News

A statement issued by the Commonwealth's watchdog Committee on Southern Africa, after a meeting here, said that Britain should act with the United States, France, Iran and other relevant governments. Dispute Over Powers

Ottawa, Provinces Agree On Constitutional Panel

By Henry Giniger

OTTAWA, Nov. 2 (NYT) — Canada's tenth effort in 50 years to make a new constitution ended here yesterday with a shaky agreement between the 10 provinces and the federal government to try to settle at least part of the problem in the next three months.

A special committee was set up to examine a possible accord and to report to a meeting of Prime Minis-ter Pierre Elliott Trudeau and provincial premiers Feb. 5 and 6.

The attempt to resolve the almost constant tension between the federal government and the provinces made some progress Tuesday when Mr. Trudeau, a strong propo-nent of central authority, gave some signs that he would be willing to yield power in several fields to the provinces. But when he insisted on some concessions in return, including a demand that the Constitution be made a Canadian document instead of a British Act of Parliament as it is at present, he ran into solid resistance from French-speaking Quebec. Other provinces were also taken aback by Mr. Trudeau's apparent attachment of control to his willingness to give up power.

Premier Rene Levesque of Ouebec, who seeks eventual political sovereignty for his province, insist-ed, as have other Quebec premiers in the past, that the question of the redistribution of power between Ottawa and the provinces be settled first. He announced that Quebec would refuse to discuss in the special committee the question of making the Consultation a Canadian document and of establishing a formula to amend it in Canada.

Behind Mr. Levesque's stand is a ong-standing Quebec fear that, with only a quarter of the country's population, its will would be flouted through vetoes hy English-speaking Canada of future consti-tutional amendments.

Canada must now ask the British Parliament to act if the constitution is to be amended. Mr. Trudeau pointed out that Canada is the only independent nation not to have its own constitution and he made it plain that he is no longer willing to go to England with his hat in hand. There were bitter exchanges between Mr. Trudeau and Mr. Levesque until the latter said that he was putting an end to them "because two Quebeckers are making speciacles of themselves."

Behind Mr. Trudeau's wish to end the 11t-year-old British North America Act appeared to be his desire to become the father of Canada's first constitution of its own. But various by-elections and infor-mal polls have shown his popularity to be sagging, and it is increas-ingly uncertain that he will continue as prime minister after June. Time is therefore running out on him, and the battered state of his authority was apparent to all the participants, almost all of whom are associated with opposition po-

The court found that although UN officials had generally made a practice of consulting employees before salary changes, representa-tives of UN employees in Geneva neglected to avail themselves of the several opportunities offered for such consultations.

It also noted that, in testifying before the General Assembly's budgetary committee here late last year, the Geneva staff representatives severely criticized a report of the International Civil Service Commission recommending the decrease and warned against adoption of the recommendation.

The tribunal reaches the conclusion." the judgment read, "that in view of the negative attitude adopted by the staff representatives, the respondent [Mr. Waldheim] could not reasonably be expected to fol-low the [consultation] procedures followed in the past.

SALISBURY, Rhodesia, Nov. 2 (AP) — Two followers of a Rhodesian internal black leader were sentenced to death yesterday by a Salisbury court for murdering five iribesmen while on a mission to talk black guerrillas into laying down their arms.

The two were followers of the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, one of three blacks who joined Prime Minister lan Smith in the interim biracial government rejected by externally based guerrillas.

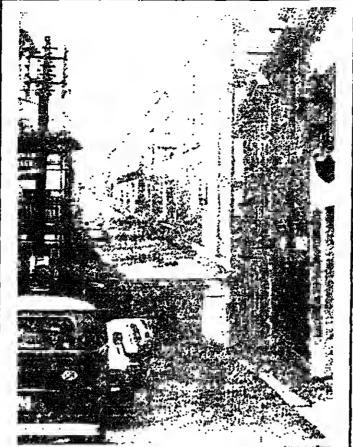

The court said that the two men. Peter Kadungure, 23, and Tedeious Rukuni, 23, were part of a group dispatched in July to an area where guerrillas were believed to be operating. They were armed for self-defense, but their mission was to find guerrillas and explain to them the March 3 internal settlement and urge them to stop fighting.

On July 18, in the village of Marureka, the court said, the two defendants herded five men into the bush and asked them whom they supported. When the men said that they supported the guerrillas, kadungure and Rukuni shot them, the court said. About 50 members of similar dressed the nation about inflation in what was described as one of his most important statements, his words fell flat in many areas, aroused hostility in others and sent the dollar and the stock market plunging. Then, in an improvized press conference, he announced steps that would prop up the dollar, by buying many, selling more gold and increasing interest rates as well as placing other burdens on loans. On this, the dollar broke through the holiday of All Saints, and soared; gold plummeted and Wall Street had a day of historic advances.

Currency Needs Stabilizing

This might provide the theme of a criticism of Mr. Carter's approach to economics. But it also opens the securities and currency markets to the charge that the gnomes of Zurich, London City and Wall Street can dance as merrily as the sylphides of Las Vegas. And it carries the graver message that global currency, which is not only the chief tool of trade but also a form of tariff, should not be in a position wherehy either heads of states or of investment firms can have quite that power to raise or lower its rates with such speed. Currency may be permitted to float on tranquil seas, but when one press conference can start a tidal wave it is high time to seek some controls.

For one of the elements in the current situation is the fact that U.S. automobiles are doing well against the West German products. Few try to discover whether Detroit has improved its product - everyone knows that the falling dollar improved Detroit's price. Now there is hope in Bonn and fear in Washington that the rising dollar (and the rising interest charges) will have a serious effect on the prices of U.S. products, which may make the problem of the unbalance of trade even

When, last week, President Carter ad- more serious and perhaps cut back U.S. production, which has given Wall Street such solid hopes.

It is clear enough that the Carter mechanisms for controlling inflation and supporting the dollar are initial steps in correcting the U.S. husiness picture. But it is also clear that this picture cannot be separated from the world's economic position. Since World War II, the industrialized nations have been much more aware of such relationships than they were after World War I, and even the Communist states are less tempted by the illusions of autarchy that divided the world during the Great Depression. There remains the very difficult matter of adjusting costs of manufactured goods to those of raw materials and of development in the Third World. But it should be apparent that one of the first needs of a world seeking orderly exchange of goods and materials is a reasonably stable currency system.

The United States may well be happy at the reversal of recent trends with respect to the dollar and the prices of U.S. stocks and bonds. It may also feel, with justice, that this reversal is justified by the underlying economic strength of the country. But the astonishing recent zigs and zags in currency values, whatever the cause, is not good for either the United States or for the world. And the major financial powers must get together to reduce such swings, to base currencies on more solid values than press conferences or emergency actions. There is enough anarchy at large today - civil wars, terrorism, actual if limited wars between states — to make it urgent for the stable portions of the globe to conduct business affairs on a more substantial basis than massive expressions of the whims of traders.

The Iranian Oil Strike

Strikes and political demonstrations in Iran have now cut off most of its tremendous flow of oil exports. That constitutes another warning to the United States of its dependence on an oil delivery system vulnerable to many kinds of disruption. Iran is the world's second-largest exporter of oil, ranking behind only Saudi Arabia. Its production has been in the range of 5.5 million barrels a day — one sixth of OPEC's total production, one eighth of all production in the world outside the Communist countries.

Through a piece of simple luck, the interruption of Iranian oil will not have an immediate effect on the rest of the world. Because OPEC plans to raise its prices at the end of the year, oil companies have been buying as much as this year's prices as they can get. Inventories are currently high, and pipelines are full. But if Iran's great oil terminals were to remain shut down for more than a few weeks, the effects might soon mean short-

How serious would the shortages be? It's impossible to tell, because that would depend very largely on the response of other members of OPEC - the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. Specifically, it would depend on Saudi Arabia. Because high prices and slow economic growth have restrained the demand for oil around the world, the Saudis have cut hack production. They are the balance wheel of the OPEC cartel, taking on themselves most of the responsibility to reduce oil exports and keep prices up. Current Saudi production is far below capacity - by most reckonings, at least 3 million barrels a day. Other Middle Eastern exporters also have an ability to raise shipments, if they choose.

Past Saudi policy suggests that they would probably put enough additional oil onto the market to prevent any real crisis — but not enough to avoid a certain stringency. In recent months, the market has been slack. There has been a bit more oil offered for sale than the buyers need. The Saudis aren't likely to perpetuate that comfortable condition.

The Iranian disruptions ought to remind Americans of the value of a Strategie Petroleum Reserve — if only they had one, in more than name. A long shutdown of the Iranian oil industry is precisely the kind of emergency for which the strategic reserve was designed. Unfortunately, the rate of filling the reserves — in underground caverns along the coast of Louisiana — has fallen far be-hind schedule, and there's hardly enough in storage currently to provide any significant insurance. Every country that uses oil now has the most direct kind of interest in the reestablishment of political stability in Iran. But if the turmoil there continues, the United States - having been slow to protect itself with reserves - must rely once again on the good will of the Saudis to forestall the possihility of serious and damaging oil shortages. THE WASHINGTON POST.

Vietnamese Refugees

Looking around them at the economy of South Vietnam, under an unsympathetic government warped by years of war, smashed by endless bombing, and now with the added distress of severe natural disasters - no wonder a population three-quarters of which are dwellers in the coastal plain look to the sea for salvation.

Fortunately there has lately been some relaxation in the restrictions imposed by receiving countries. The Americans have opened their doors wider. Australia and Canada are taking more and other countries may follow. But if betterment of their hopeless circumstances is as much as anything the cause for escape and if, as is reported, news gets back of the fate of those who have gone, might not more open doors simply increase the flow? Obviously the best solution for all such distressed people is that the conditions in their own country should be so improved that their wish to emigrate should disappear. Vietnam should be shamed to action by this exodus.

- From the Times (London).

Swiss Turnabout

The Swiss national bank's decision to intervene heavily on the foreign exchange market represents a turnahout involving the abandonment of solid experience in favor of experiment. It involves three hypotheses. First, it assumes that many Swiss exporters will be unable to survive at a Swiss franc rate such as that at the end of Setpember. The second assumption is that the Swiss Central Bank can influence exchange rates effectively hy concentrating on the Deutsche mark and hoping that the market will follow the national bank's lead. And third, success depends on the additional money created by intervention being kept out of internal Swiss circulation until industrial exporters are over the hump and the central bank can go back to its previous policy of containing inflation. If all these assumptions are justified, Swiss exporters may be spared some of the worst; but if any of them proves wrong, unpleasant adjustments seem inevitable.

From the Neue Zuercher Zeitung (Zurich).

Seventy-Five Years Ago November 3, 1903

PARIS — The Boston Herald commented: "Admittedly, affairs in Morocco are in a had way. It is very doubtful if the Sultan has control over more than one third of the population. But would the possession of Morocco by an European country pay for the long and costly war that would have to be waged against the tribesmen in a country that is practically unknown to Europeans? Even if France and Spain should unite and send armies to Morocco, all they could hope to do would be to hold the larger towns, and even that only with a great trial."

Fifty Years Ago November 3, 1928

LONDON - A landslide for the Labor Party in the industrial towns was reckoned tonight in the nationwide municipal elections, the final results showing net Labor gains of 188. "This is-only another indication and a very certain one of the direction and strength of the political tide," said Ramsay MacDonald, Labor leader. He added that the result meant a Labor victory in the comiog general election, an opinion sharply contested at Conservative headquarters. Another feature of the election was the further dwindling of aroused indignation in France.

Vichy: French Skeleton in the Closet

It has made Page 1 headlines in newspapers across the political spectrum, and President Valery Giscard d'Estaing admonished L'Express, the news magazine which published it, saying that freedom of the press should be hedged with respect for "truth and decen-

In the interview, Louis Darquier (who added an aristocratic de Pellepoix to his name) served up the familiar racist mixture of historical lies - for instance, that it is "a Jewish invention" that the Nazis killed 6 million Jews — and anti-Semitic demagogery which circu-lates, in plain envelopes like por-nography, in every Western capital.

Vichy France

The shocking difference is that Mr. Darquier's remarks appear in a respected mass-circulation magazine and, more importantly, incarnate a ghostly, but recognizable voice from the imperfectly-sealed tomb of Vichy France and Nazi

Io the bue and cry, L'Express has been taken to task for publishing Mr. Darquier's unsavory comments. No one is accusing L'Ex-press, which has liberal credentials, including campaigns against French racism in Algeria, of en-dorsing Mr. Darquier's views. The magazine and the interviewer (himself the author of books denouncing anti-Semitism during the Occupation) had the same motive: to confront France with its own re-

The immediacy of the interview, however, triggered charges that L'Express had been irresponsible in giving Mr. Darquier a forum. Health Minister Simone Veil said "L'Express was wrong to publish the interview without more commentory and photos of wartime atrocitles." She asked whether "it is not expecting too much of the gen-eral public" to recognize the evil and falsehoods in Mr. Darquier's racist remarks and historical distor-

This line of reasoning borders on a plea for consorship, French newspapers commented. The whole episode — notably official French dismay — has played into the hands of Third World and Communications have who are urning nist diplomats here, who are urging a Unesco charter on media that would justify government censorsbsip. The skepocism exhibited by French politicians about the maturity of the public, combined with revulsion against racism, are precisely the appealing ingredients of the Soviet-sponsored Unesco draft resolution. If the Unesco plan were adopted in France, the "L'Express" interview would justify sanc-tions against the magazine.

'Frightening'

"What is frightening about this French reaction is the implied fragility of all the work done for 33 years documenting the horrors of Nazi racism," commented Henri Amoureux, French historian, "It's as if people fear a single man't reas if people fear a single man's re-marks can call into doubt hundreds probably innocent of the original of books and dozens of films on the pinting.

Holocaust."

The question remains, however:
What is contained in the dogged falsehoods of an aged representa-tive of a defeated, discredited Fas-cist apparatus that can so pro-foundly trouble French opininn? If French outrage is understandable over Mr. Darquier's gast (including the years be has lived unmolested in Spain without any French request for his extradition, even after Franco's death), French reactions also contain powerful undertones touching deeper, less admissible national emotions.

The Darquier interview broke a taboo largely intact since World War II against reviving too vividly the ambiguity of France toward the German Occupation. Mr. Darquier —an ordinary French Fascist, who fought against the Germans in both world wars, blamed the Jews for his country's defeat and exploited his German-bestowed power to fill his pockets - is an authentic, troubling representative of those shameful days.

His re-emergence from the pages of L'Express, like a skeleton's hand

ARIS — A provocative anti-Semitic interview with the got to lock, has stirred up half-n known as "France's repressed memories of Vichy colman known as "France's repressed memories of Vichy collicians," the Vichy official laboration, together with the repugacoused of deporting 75,000 Jews nant thought that neo-Nazism to Nazi concentration camps, has ervone has assumed and an uneasy reminder that anti-Semitism is too deep-rooted, too high-placed in France to have disappeared.

The opaque quality of "over-reaction" in the French furor may be explained as rejuctance among most Frenchmen to confront these issues consciously or directly.

Understandably and probably wisely. France has tried to put Vichy behind it rather than rake over a sad, divisive period, Even Gen. De Gaulle chose to bestow on France a national self-image of resistance io place of the historical truth of compromise or tardy conversioo to resistance on the part of most Frenchmen during four years of occupation.

After an immediate postwar purge. France, part of the victori-ous democratic alliance, felt no need to undermine its own recovery with too much probing in gray areas. For most Frenchmen, it was disclosed about the deportations painful enough to have lived the and as the German takeover ended period; They had no desire to relive any semblance of French autonomy under Marshall Petain, French The Sorrow and the Pity," an acclaimed study of the occupatioo screened on most European television, never has been shown on French oetworks. France is the sole West European country which de-elined to buy "Holocaust."

In this French revisionist view of history, a crucial tenet is that French Fascism was somehow imported here by the Nazi occupiers. This complacent illusion is precise ly what L'Express hoped to shatter with the Darquier dossier documentlog the indigenous roots of French anu-Semitism.

Analyzing the unexpected public outcry, L'Express editor Olivier Todd said that "the French dislike. anything which reminds them they can be as anti-Semitic as any other European nation."

Most Frenchmen are reluctant to recall that a national majority, and the church, acquiesced to anti-Semitie measures - such as Jewish quntas in liberal professions - until as late as 1942. As the facts were opinion changed, and resisters turned into a resistance movement.

But and-Semitism is rooted in modern French history. French Fascism found fertile ground in the Stavisky scandal in 1935 — in which a Jewish financier's swindles ruined many Frenchmen — and in French resentment against the in-flux of Jews fleeing persecution in Germany.

Just as the Dreyfus affair failed to prevent a revival of anti-Semitism in the 1930s, the horrors of World War If might not prevent, with the passage of time, the ap-pearance of neo-Nazisto.

What seems to be happening now - with the Darquier interview, with an account of Marshal Petain's last days published in Paris-Match, with the appearance of photographs of wartime Jewish suifering under the hands of the French collaborationists — is that a younger generation, sensing these dangers, is starting to rake the embers in an effort to assimilate their elders' painful history.

The British Example

By Anthony Lewis

WASHINGTON — One of the polled, 69 percent favored the limit, want that to happen again. Nor do VV great political success stories in the Western world is being written these days in Britain. The La-bor Prime Minister, James Callaghan, has taken what looked to be a troubled government sliding toward a tough election and pushed Labor into a surprising lead over the Conservatives.

The secret of Callaghan's success, everyone agrees, is his wage policy. To light inflation he wants to hold wage increases to 5 percent a year. That is just a guideline, but Callaghan is defending it as if he were Winston Churchill fighting on the beaches. And there are some signs that he is winning. Workers at two General Motors plants recently rejected their leaders' call for strikes. At huge meetings — 13,000 at one, 3,000 at another — unioo members stood up and said it would be better for everyone, including the union, if Callaghan's guidelines held.

The signals are by no means all set fair. Ford workers have been on strike for five weeks, demanding in-creases way over 5 percent. Other unions say they will never settle for that. Callaghan can expect the annual winter struggle with the coal

But there is strong evidence that his plea for self-restraint to stop inflatioo is persuading the rank and file. A Gallup Poll last week showed 66 percent of those surveyed in favor of the wages guide-line. Amnng union members

Not Immune

No, America is not immune to the economic storms that ravaged other countries. If we think we are, we have learned nothing from the last few years. And the alternatives to wage restraint are the same here as in Britain: zooming inflation or a disastrous recession.
The United States tried recession as a cure just a few years ago. That was the Nixon-Ford economic poli-cy in 1974 and 1975, and the result was our worst economic slump in nearly 40 years: unemployment up to 8.5 percent, real gross national product down. The inflation rate did drop, from 11 percent to 5.8.

But that episode and others have shown us that did and others have shown us that rigidities in the econ-omy now keep inflation going even during a recession.

The more so as Israel's other Arab neighbor with territorial claims against it, Syria, had been embroiled for years in a bitter feud with its neighbor to the east, trac. The reconciliation between Syria

Since both are supplied by the Soviet Union, and since the Syrians have over 2,000 tanks, and the tragis over a thousand, the com nation looks like a formidable fighting force.

But in fact Syria has only a narrow military front with Israel. A single road leads from Baghdad to Damascus, and from Damascus to the front along the Golan Heights. So the Israelis could wipe out a joint attack long before it got underway.

Moreover, the Syrians on the joint committee are known for their hostility to Iraq. On close inspec-tion the committee looks like a device whereby Syria can gracefully refuse forever Iraq's offer of mili-tary assistance. Militarily, in other words, the reconciliation is zero.

Far more important, however, i the symbolic act of burying the -hatchet. Presidents Hafez al-Assad., of Syria and Hassan al-Bakr of Iraq have sunk long-standing differences of both ideology and prestige to form a united front against the Egyptians. By that rapprochement they delivered a message to the moderate Arabs.

Carter's Dollar Propping Accepts Risk of Recession

By Hobart Rowen

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2 (WP) — The complex series of actions that President Carter announced yesterday to support the dollar boil down to this: He is deliberately taking the chance of recession next year as the only way to beat inflation.

Mr. Carter has opted to put the economy through the traditional wringer of oghl mon-ey, taking a leaf out of the "old-line religion" of the Richard Nixon era that the only sure way to lick inflation is restraining economic

They also were an implicit concession as well that the president's week-old voluntary anti-inflation guidelines program — one ob-jective of which was to restore faith in the dollar - had failed before it even got started. Democratie economists George Perry and Arthur Okun of the Brookings Institution and Otto Eckstein of Data Resources Inc., all said vesterday that the Carter program made recession almost a sure bet for next year.

Mr. Perry and Mr. Okun saw the recession beginning as early as next spring, with unem-ployment, oow 6 percent, rising 10 7 percent by the end of the year. They also thought the recession could be mild and end quickly.

That would be the best possible timing for Mr. Carter, who would plainly prefer to have any downturn out of the way and the economy heading up again before the 1980 election.

But conservative economist William Feller of the American Enterprise Institute warned that any belt-tightening program, to be credi-ble, would have to run at least three years.

In addition to all else, the course adopted by Mr. Carter may be the only alternative to the full-fledged wage-price controls he has shunned as a way of fighting inflation. And a side effect of a recession could be to reinforce Mr. Carter's guidelines program.

Labor in Line

"If there's a recession in 1979," Mr. Perry observed, "labor oegotiations will be con-ducted against a background of a weakening demand for manpower, and Mr. Carter won't have to worry so much about George Meany and his reaction to wage guidelines."

and his reaction to wage guidelines."

A restrictive money and credi! policy — coupled with massive intervencon, a plan that up to now the administration had rejected as throwing good money after bad — has long been recommended by economic fundamentalists and is the prescription that frantic European money markets have been treing.

"The groupe of Twich not their way," said

"The gnomes of Zurich got their way," said Mr. Okun, who added that "the risks have now definitely shifted in the direction of recession for next year."

High administration officials conceded that there are always risks that you affect domestic growth when you tighten up on monetary policy." But Mr. Carter went along with the whole program, first laid on his desk last Friday, when Economic Council chairman Charles Schultze privately opined that the recession risk was not a "major" one.

That view was echoed yesterday by former Treasury undersecretary Robert Roosa. He said, "The interest rate as a deterrent to the economy is a minimal thing, compared to the benefits; the real economy is pretty strong and will get a beneficial shock effect from all

Internal Debate

Still, the Carter decision was made after a tortuous intra-administration debate. As recently as Tuesday, Barry Bosworth of the Council on Wage and Price Stability warned that heavy reliance on high interest rates would guarantee a recession.

But it was also clear from a generally oegative response to the administration's voluntary anti-inflation program that something re dramade was necessary to halt the decline of the dollar.

Mr. Perry said yesterday: "If the name of the game is to get the inflation rate down to 4 percent by election time 1980, they oeed to have a recession to bring that about."

Last weekend, Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal and Treasury Uoder Secretary

Anthony Solomon argued with Mr. Schultze and Fed chairman William Miller that all other considerations now had to be subordi-nated to stopping the dollar's decline. For weeks, administration economists had been insisting that it would be of little use to intervene massively in the markets, and the dollar would right itself.

But the dollar drop "got out of hand," Mr. Blumenthal admitted yesterday, "and we came to the conclusion that strong action had to be taken." Once the decision was made that a dramatic announcement was necessary, Treasury and Fed officials agreed that the centerpiece should be a full point increase in the discount rate.

The idea was that this would be big enough, all at once, to accomplish the intended purpose. "Otherwise," an official said,
"the markets would have been looking for aseries of smaller jumps and never would have been satisfied with each one."

A high Treasury official said that responses in the money markets yesterday "confirms our view that forceful action now will prevent interest rates from going as high next year as they might otherwise have gone."

Blumenthal Concedes Risk

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2 (Reuters) Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal said today there is a risk of a recession resulting from the "major reversal" of policy signaled in the new measures yesterday, but he added, any policy change involves risk.

"On balance, I don't know whether the risk is any greater" than doing nothing, he said in a television interview. "But any policy change of this kind involves risk," he said. Concerning the interest rate increase and other dollar-support action, he said: "I think you could say it's a grain the said: "I think you could say it's a major reversal in the sense that the president decided that tough action was need-ed to stop this attack on the dollar."

Separately, Robert Strauss, special trade representative, said the latest moves to fight inflation and strengthen the dollar will cause interest rates to peak earlier than they would have without those moves. He said the steps taken this week "may be the jolt we oeed to get a much earlier peaking" of interest rates.

U.S. Posts 0.9% Rise In Wholesale Prices

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2 (UPI)

— Any hopes that inflation might ease up in the next few months were dashed today when the government reported a sharp climb in wholesale prices — particularly for food — during October.

The 0.9 percent overall increase in consumer-ready goods including in consumer-ready goods, including the 1.7-perceot rise in food prices were identical to September advances and prompted government economists to abandon predictions that prices would moderate during the remainder of 1978.

"It is not good oews," said Commerce Department economist William Cox. "In fact, one could say it's bad news — unexpectedly bad."

The Labor Department reported:

• Intermediate prices — those for products not quite ready for sale to consumers — jumped 1.2 percent last month for the largest gain in four years. Intermediate food prices surged 2.8 percent, confood items 1.1 percent.

 Prices for crude materials, the initial level of production, climbed 3.0 percent for the biggest increase since February. Crude food jumped 3.6 percent

Not counting food, prices of consumer non-durable goods rose 1.1 percent, the largest gain in that category since 1974. The acceleration was paced by gasoline, home heating oil, tires, shoes, clothing and beverages.

Over the past 12 months, consumer-ready food costs have gone up 11.9 percent and all wholesale prices bave advanced 8.6 percent. The overall wholesale price in-dex stood at 199.7 last month, meaning costs have oearly doubled since 1967.

Mr. Cox said the administration's hopes that prices — particu-larly for food — would stabilize during the second half of the year have been shot out of the water" by the wholesale performances of September and October. John Early, a Labor Department economist, agreed, saying hopes for improvement "don't seem to have been fulfilled." "There is oothing here to give you any hope for improve-ment," he said.

I THINK WE CAN COME TO A DECISION RIGHT

NOW. WE'LL SEND YOU 500 IN ASSORTED COLORS

YES? WHICH COLOR DON'T YOU WANT? HMM ...

YOU REALIZE THAT MEANS WE'LL HAVE TO REPACKAGE .... ADDS TO OUR COST. YES.

WELL, LOOK DOWN THE COLUMN THAT SAYS

BROKEN PACKAGES'. UH-HUH,...TOO HIGH?

TELL YOU WHAT, SINCE IT'S A QUANTITY

ORDER, I'M WILLING TO SPLIT THE DIFFERENCE

OVER THE PRICE ORIGINALLY QUOTED.

YES?...OKAY YOU'LL GET ALL THE COLORS.

EXCEPT THE BLUE, WELL, WHEN I TALKED

TO YOUR MR. PETRIE HE SAID IT WAS ALL

YOU HAD ANY DOUBTS, UH-HUH. OH, OF COURSE,

FETCH

TONIGHT. RIGHT.

© BOOTH 1978

YOU'RE IN A BIND? WE'LL GET THAT ORDER

ON A PLANE WE HAVE

Then it's the telephone to the U.S.A.

THANK YOU.

RIGHT, OH YES, I TALKED TO HIM. SAID YOU HAVE ENOUGH IN STOCK. ENOUGH TO HOLD YOU FOR AWHILE, SAID TO TELL YOU IF

Soybeans rose on mostly speculative buying. Commercial users were both buyers and sellers. Expectations about two reports due for re-lease after the close triggered some buying. A crop survey by an influential private forecaster was expected to show soybean crop size smaller than earlier record-size projections, and a report on soybean processing was expected to show continued heavy demand for soybenns, some traders said.

At the close soybeans were 514 to 814 cents higher, with November contracts quoted at $6.97; wheat was 114 to 236 cents higher, December 114 to 236 cents higher, December 115 to 236 cents higher, December 215 t ber $3.60%; corn was 1½ to 2½ cents higher, December $2.34½ and oats were 14 to 14 cents higher.

LYING LOW

By Diane Johnson. Knopf. 278 pp. $8.95.

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

WHAT does it feel like to lose your personality through disuse? To forget what you are like, what you wanted to do in the world? To give up hope, joy, pur-

This is the situation of Marybeth Howe, the heroine of Diane John-son's novel, "Lying Low." She is a heroine of negation, a contemporary character. Marybeth was once angry enough and passionate enough about her convictions to kill a man. He was a scientist, developing a new kind of napalm in a laboratory that Marybeth and some other "revolotionaries" blew They had meant to telephone the scientist and warn him to get out, but they forgot. Filled with moral indignation, they killed him out of carelessness.

Now, after six years of living underground, Marybeth discovers that ideas or ideals shrivel and die when they are not sustained by contact with people. She learns that she cannot live without the world she never made and wanted to destroy. After six years of conceal-ing, of biting back, what she thinks and feels, she has lost the capacity to think and feel. She imagines a society in which every one has so much to hide that life literally becomes unspeakable.

As a means of making contact,
Marybeth plans to give herself up, to face a jail term of 20 years to life. Before surrendering to the police, however, she resolves to spend her last night of liberty on sex, which is her bottom line, her irreducible minimum, of self. As you can see, "Lying Low" is a rather drastic portrait of a type of modern beroine.

Reinducted Into the World

Wheo another sociological heroine, a young mother in a com-mune, asks Marybeth to mind her four-year-old soo for a couple of days, these 48 hours of fostermothering have the effect of reinducting Marybeth into the real world. A poster urging her to let a friend massage her feet tonight brings tears to her eyes. A bit of graffiti on a wall — Tracy Morris and Greg Garcia will (copulate) forever - leads her to rhapsodize in these terms: "What an idea, what vanity, what hopefulness, what sweetness there was in the world."

Marybeth lives in a rooming house in a small town in California, run by Theo, a 60-year-old ballet teacher who has "the elegant sharp features of an.elderly actress worn thin by a lifetime of high-class parts." Theo is "the voice of right unreason." She does "cosmic work": crying for creatures who have no one else to cry for them. Theo is rather ashamed to think that she has chosen a life of "art and order" over a "messy life" like youn's. Yet, SAYS TO self, an ordinary life may be the biggest risk, the most desperate heroism of all, for it can leave you without even bitterness or defeat to sustain you, with nothing but disappointment.

Theo still flirts with commitment. She says that she may have her face lifted and give a few recitals, for her body is still serviceable. She is going to visit a prison to give a lecture-demonstration on dance She dreams of teaching the men is leap, like great cats. They will leap over the walls. As she says herself she "valued recklessness."

Ouida a plump young Brazilian woman who also lives in Theo' boarding house functions as a Greek chorus in "Lving Low." Sh sees the United States and its peo ple in the simple declarative sen tences of her elementary gramma book. In her eyes, there is a gram mar of life and she is intent or learning it. She tries to adapt the primitive gusto and hothouse fairly of her childhood to — of all places. es — California in the seventies.

California Kafkaesque

Ouida has a suitor, a middle aged black man named Griggs whose failures to meet her on an pointed street corners is Californ Kafkaesque. Griggs is preoccupied with his several unruly children and his lawsuit against a bank whose employees allegedly conspired with the police and the court to cheathin of $300. In a corner of his mind, he is determined to have Children and his buscheness and the Ouida as his bousekeeper and she predisposed to him to the extent of admiring a sofa and a lamp among his furnishings. Also, she desire American citizenship, permanen admission into a grammatica world. Griggs procrastinates, her when he picks up a plunger and helps Ouida unstop a toilet in Theo's boarding house, she know that he is hers.

Diane Johnson has written four novels before "Lying Low." Until The Shadow Knows," the penultil mate one, they showed a steady improvement, moving from merely good to remarkable. The Shadow Knows" also had a rather passive heroine, but she was the vacuum. that nature abbors and things thundered in on her. In "Lying-Low," Marybeth suffers a bit from .: the imitative fallacy. The reader gets a bit tired of her inertia, which is not sufficiently disturbed.

A young man called Chuck, Sweet behaves like the joke his. name suggests, but he has no punchline. When Theo abandons art and order for recklessness, for the messy life, she is out of character and what happens to her falls far short of inevitability. Perhaps. the difference between this novel and Miss Johnson's last one lies in. the fact that Marybeth's personality is shaped by politics, while the heroine of "The Shadow Knows" is one of those inspired eccentrics who seems to be born of herself

China Uncovers Another Section Of Great Wall

HONG KONG, Nov. 2 (UPI) -A 2,000-year old section of the Great Wall built during China's Warring-States period was found in Kirin Province during a 1975-77 ar-chaeological survey, the New China News Agency reported.

It was during the Warring-States period in Northern China that the king of each state vying for control of Peking built a defense wall. The newly discovered section belonged to the Yen State. After China was unified in 221 B.C. the defense walls were linked to create the famous Great Wall of China. The discovery pushes the loca-tion of the oorthern section of the Yen State's defense wall 72 miles further north than bistorical records indicated, NCNA said. The new section is 6 to 24-feet high and more than 72 miles long. the agency said.

BRIDGE.

By Alan Truscott

One of the brightest bidding ideas ever conceived is also one of the oldest -- the Lightoer double.

The idea is to double a slam to ask for an unusual lead — usually the lead of dummy's first-bid suit. Such o lead would not normally occur to the opening leader without an indication from his partoer. An incidental bonus is that it prevents some greedy doubles that rate to gain a few points or lose a bundle.

On some rare occasions the Lightner double fails because the opponents are listening as well as partner. On the diagramed deal from a rubber bridge game, North-South climbed to the normal contract of six hearts. At this point, West produced a Lightner double. asking his partner to lead a diamond. South's original suit. This was the right idea, for the slam rolls home easily on any lead but a dia-mond, since the spade suit provides discards.

But South was listening, and he knew what the double meant. He knew that West held the ace-queen of diamonds and that East would lead the suit. So he retreated to six no-trump, making sure that dia-monds could not be led through him on the opening lead.

Six no-trump from the South position could not be defeated. Naturally West did not lead the diamond ace, which he knew would give the declarer a trick. But after the passive lead of the singleton heart, South actually made an overtrick.

South took two heart winners. crossed to the spade king and ran the rest of the heart suit. To guard his spades East had to give up a club. South then threw his spade loser and played his black-suit winners, catching West in a minor-suit squeeze.

So the Lightner double did not save the day for East-West, but it cost practically nothing. East would not have thought of a diamond lead if left to his own devices. And there was no certainty that so the part would proposed into the advantage. South would appreciate the advantage of retreating to no-trump, so the double might have gained a stack of points.

Rose is a star who cannot be ex-pected to shine that much longer. His departure would burt the aging Reds, who have failed to make the playoffs the pasi two seasons. Bot with players like Johnny Bench, Joe Morgan and George Foster on the roster, the Reds could hide a good-glove, no-hit man like Ray Knight at third. Still, the Reds will miss Rose.

Bribery Is Alleged

Jockeys at Tracks in U.S. Said to Have Aided Fixer

NEW YORK, Nov. 2 (AP) — A coovicted horse race fixer has accused Angel Cordero, Jorge Velasquez, and Branlio Baeza, among other jockeys, of accepting bribes to control races for him, according to a copyrighted story in Sports Illustrated magazine. Tony Ciulla, who is under federal protection, revealed that he had fixed several bundred races at tracks across the country and was most active in the New York area between 1972 and 1975, Sports Illustrated reported.

The FBl and the Justice Department's Organized Crime Strike Force have been investigating the race riggings since 1973, according to the article. Ciulla paid Cordero, who has ridden two Kentucky Der-by winners, as much as $6,000 and other jockeys as little as $200 to control races, according to the mag-azine. Ciulla's method was to bribe jockeys to bold back their horses in exacta or trifecta races, so that their horses would not finish 1-2 or 1-2-3, the story said. Wagers would be placed on the other combinations, resulting in big winnings for Civila and his partners, Sports Illustrated

Mike Venezia, Jacinto Vasquez and Mickey Solomone were among the other prominent active jockeys mentioned by Ciulla, and retired ockeys mentioned included Eddie Belmonte, Con Errico, and Baeza. All have denied involvement with Ciulla, the magazine said. Ciulla described Cordero as being most adept at pulling back a horse and said that he and other top jockeys, although perennially big money-earners, accepted the bribes so that they could avoid tax-before a federal grand jury in New York that on several occasions, through intermediaries, he paid Cordero, Velasquez, Baeza, Venez-ia, Vasquez, and Belmonte between $3,000 and $6,000 a race to hold back horses, the magazine said. For key horses, Ciulla said that he paid as much as $8,000 to a jockey, the

Ciulla also had dealings with Johnny Campo, a prominent New York trainer, involving secret ownerships of horses who were used in fixed races, the magazine

Ciulla is cooperating with organized crime strike forces in various cities, including Boston and New York, the magazine said. A federal grand jury in Detroit recently in-dicted eight persons, including jockeys and trainers, on charges stemming from Ciulla's race-fixing operations, the article reported.

Testifies in New Jersey

According to Sports Illustrated, Ciulia currently is testifying in another race-fixing case in Mouot Holly, N.J., involving Garden State

Ciulla, 35, a native of Boston, is a member of the Federal Witness Program, and has been given a new identity. Sports Illustrated said. By the time he was 26, the magazine said, Ciulia was barred from entering the 55 tracks policed by the Thoroughbred Racing Protective Ciulia was convicted on six counts of conspiracy to commit sports bribery at New Jersey tracks, was convicted of drugging horses in Massachusetts and bribing race of-ficials in Rhode Island, Sports Illustrated reported.

SANTA ANA, Calif., Nov. 2 — With all the to-do about Mickey Mouse's 50th hirthday Nov. 17, one wonders what the mouse himself thinks about it. Mickey hasn't starred in a movie since 1953, when his last cartoon, "The Simple Things," was released. He retired from the screen long after his career had begun to decline: Mick-ey's apex is generally conceded to be his role in "Fantasia" in 1940.

"He became a symbol of all that is wholesome," complained Jerry Muller of Costa Mesa, a Mickey fan and collector of cartooo art. "They insisted that he be Mr. Nice Guy, everybody's good oeigh-bor, so there wasn't much in the way of gags left for him.

"I mean, they put pants on him and Hawaiian shirts. He became more of a corporate symbol of Disney, so they kicked him upstairs into the corporate offices."

Crayon holder.

Despite all the Disney publicity about the birth-day, one wonders whether Mickey, leaning back in his swivel chair, feet up oo desk, yearns for his salad days back in the Depression.

If so, Mickey should take a slight detour from his next cooference at Disneyland and drop by the Bowers Museum in nearby Santa Ana. There, Muller is displaying 270 artworks and artifacts of the mouse's career; they come from 39 collectors around Muller says his show differs from the official Disoey-sponsored exhibit at the Library of Congress.

"This is a grass-roots thing. We didn't get anything from the Disney organization itself," he maintains.

The exhibit spans Mickey's career from original animation frames of his first movie to the latest merchandising items — a working Mickey Mouse tele-phooe and a 50th birthday collector's plate.

Different

In Mickey's "golden age" of the 1930s, he was a different character, Muller said. His image then was Disney World's anniversary show.

"Steamboat Willie," the first sound cartoon, premiered at the Colony Theater in New York, Mickey was one of the few Americans born full-grown and

His aggressiveness on the screen made him a per-manent part of American culture, but his boss's aggressiveness in merchandising made him a permacent part of American commerce.

At the Santa Ana exhibit is a full set of the Mickey Mouse Circus Train, made by Lionel in 1935, said to be worth as much as $800 oow. There is the 1934 Emersoo Mickey Mouse Radio, "the worst radio ever made, electronically speaking," says Muller. It's worth about $600, he adds.

There also are the familiar Mickey Mouse watches, wind-up toys, dolls, figurines and trinkets.

"There have been at least 5,000 Mickey Mouse products," Muller estimates. "The only one close to that is [Charles] Schulz with his Peanuts characters. But he's really not even close yet. Maybe be'll have caught up when Charley Brown turns 50."

A Hand in French Politics

By Andreas Freund

PARIS, Nov. 2 (NYT) — A television funoyman and a nighetub caricaturist here have devised a new card game on French politics.
The funnyman who drew up the game's rules is Jean Amadon. The draftsman who contributed 37 caricatures of well known French political figures is known as Dadzu. Their joint creation has been baptized Les Grandes Familles Politiques Françaises

Each player tries to be the first to assemble a complete set of one of the six "political families" represented, each family consisting of six cards with the likenesses of the primary pols of a particular persuasion.

Presidential Card

Four is the ideal number of players, and each is dealt six cards. In trying to complete their sets, each player in turn calls out the name of a card card he requires. The top card is turned up from the face-down stack; if it is not the named card, the player may exchange any unwanted card in his hand for one from the pile of those yet undistributed.

There is one more card, the 37th, which depicts President Valery Giscard d'Estaing. That card cannot be called up because you don't call up the President of the Republic — it isn't done. The six "families" are the Republican Party, supporting Gis-card d'Estaing: his reluctant oeo-Gaullist allies under the mayor of Paris, Jacques Chirac; the also pro-government Centrists: the opposition Socialists; the latter's angry former part-oers, the Communist Party; and, finally, a group of political out-

The latter, grouped under the eading "Those from headiog "Those from Elsewhere," range from the Trouskyites ultra-radical Alain Krivine to the extreme right's Jean-Marie Le Pen and include the ecologist Rene Dumont and the maverick former Foreign Minister Michel Jobert, ft is Job-ert who first used "elsewhere" to designate political position when he once answered a question about where he stood in relation to the other parties.

The presidential card is a special card. Since the president is supposed to be above the parties, his card can be used as a joker, replacing any other. Alternatively, because the president holds the right of dissolution of the National Assembly, the player who holds his card can stop the game if he so pleases.

Another intricacy is that certain cards when drawn from the pile give a player a boous or a

You lose one turn if you draw the Communists' Georges Seguy (because of a general strike he has just called in his capacity of head of France's biggest labor union federation), and the same in the case of Socialist Gaston Defferre, mayor of Marseilles and yachting enthusiast, (because he is, you see, out to sea.)

Penalties

Worse still, you lose two turns if you draw Raymond Barre (out of reach for 48 hours while cal-culating the difference between the expected and the actual rate

And you are out of the game altogether if you draw Michel Debre, the Gaullists' ardent advocate of a stepped-up birthrate (since in that respect, "while playing cards you are just wasting time.")

The rules also specify that since this is a political game, you are allowed to cheat, provided you are oot found out.

If you are found out, the game may continue, but the other players should "fake disapprov-

Cosell Raps Sport, PEOPLE: Coseu Rups opers,

Covell is at it again, training his verbal cannons on players, team owners and sports reporters. Calling sports "the single most corrupting influence in American society," Cosell revealed to the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association at Boca Raton, Fla., that sportsmanship has been replaced by the pursuit of money. "The people are saying the game is holy," Cosell said. "Winning is everything. Don't touch our Carnelot. I tell the truth. If a game stinks, I say it stinks. That may be what the people don't like to hear." And the broadcasterne-lawyer criticized the hiring of former players as sports commentators. "There are two professions: that one can be hired at with little experience. One is prostitution," said old pro Cosell, "and the other is sportscasting. Too frequently, they become the same."

The io restaurant in London just now is Cecconi's, whose first-class thef and staff are late of Venice's Cipriani Hotel. Getting a table there is almost as hard as getting tickets to "Evita," a musical based on the life of Evita Peron. On a recent day, customers included Ed-ward Heath, Sammy Davis and Television sportscaster Howard Walter Anneaberg. The form lames's was on his way to visit Monet estate at Giverny's, about miles northwest of Paris.
